

Writing

Procrastination is the thief of time, collar him" - Charles Dickens. ~~I think~~. The author wanted to say that the procrastination is an awful thing, and you should avoid it if you ~~also~~ want to be successful. ~~I think he is~~ he is write.

I think he is right. Firstly, people can ~~postpone~~ ^{hesitate} themselves. They can think that they don't know something ~~to~~ to do the ~~or~~ task, but all they do is wasting time. The avoidance of hard tasks just stops you, ~~because~~. However, people ~~usually~~ ^{usually} just ~~stop~~ don't want to do the task. They ~~are~~ ^{sit} sitting on the bed and forget about the project. I can call it time-wasting, because new people sitting on the bed and relaxing but ~~but~~ they have to finish the task, so they'll need to postpone it on the next day, but tomorrow ~~the~~ people ~~will~~ ^{will} have less time and they will be supposed to rush in.

Two weeks ago I had to write a text for my Russian class. I didn't want to do it, so I just postponed it. Days went by and the day "X", when I needed to bring my ~~text~~ ^{text} to the class was getting closer. I was idle, ~~and~~ ^{and} waited for the last day, and then I needed to do my text in the night.

In conclusion I can say that the procrastination is an awful habit. Now Charles Dickens said you need to "collar him".
